On Tuesday 26 June, AFCEA The Hague Chapter, in close cooperation with NIDV C2TP* and with support from KIVI, will organize a Luncheon meeting at the De Ruyter van Steveninckkazerne, homebase of 13 Light Brigade, Eindhovensedijk 48, 5688 GN Oirschot.

As mentioned in the Netherlands Defense white paper, the Dutch armed forces will start to experiment with robotics and automated systems. The new project leader, MAJ Martijn Hädicke, will explain the background and aim of this initiative. He will brief on the innovative working practice in the project, including the cooperation with industry and knowledge institutes. Martijn will also present the first use-cases, that form the basis of near-term operational need statements.

Very recently, the Defence Innovation Greenhouse (DIG) has been rewarded with its first contract by the Netherlands DMO. James White, owner of The DIG, will deliver a brief on this "multinational consortium for defence innovation, collaboration and best practices". It will become clear how this new organization can help accelerate the acquisition and implementation of urgent capabilities for military forces and other crisis responders. And how industry and academia will be involved.

Also on the agenda is a short brief on the so-called Industry Initiative for Agile Acquisition (I2A2) by Leendert van Bochoven from IBM.
